THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

Though there has been no great ball in the last week, there have been one or two small dances, many handsome dinner parties and luncheons, and some of the largest receptions with music of the season, which, together with the opera and one or two weddings of unusual importance and interest to society, made the hours of the week fly with rapidity. The disagreeable weather, instead of retarding, has only seemed to heighten the gayety, and coachmen and grooms who are obliged to remain often for hours in the frosty air, will especally welcome the coming of Ash Wednesday, which is yet two weeks off. Unless all indications fail, the sunset day of society will be even more brilliant than its sunrise. The principal incident on Tuesday night was the reception, with music, given by Mrs. William C. Schermerhorn, at her home in West Twenty-thirdst., one of the most spacious and elegant houses in that part of the city. The hostess was assisted in lying by her daughters, Mrs. John Innes Kane and Mrs. Schermerhorn. M. and Mme. Febvre, of the Comedie Francaise, appeared in a comedy entitled "Historie du Vieux Temps," by Guy de Maupassant, M. Febvre personating the Count and Mme. Febvre the Marquise, M. Stavenhagen played a Nocturne, the Liszt Rhapsodie Hongrois and a Chopin-Liszt Chant Polonais. Mile. Sybil Sanderson, who was to sing, was taken ill almost at the last moment, and her place was filled by Signor Campanari, who sang several songs. An claborate supper served by Pinard followed the reception and concert. Mrs. Schermerhorn will give similar entertainment on Tuesday night.

Wednesday was the liveliest day of the week and young and old alike made the most of their epportunities. The wedding of Miss Emily Greene Welling, daughter of Mrs. Charles Hunt Welling and J. Noble Hayes, at Calvary Protestant Epis copal Church, occupied the morning hours, and although quiet, was an exceedingly pretty affair. A profusion of bright-colored flowers, most advantageously disposed, adorned the chancel, and the bride was lovely in her satin gown with an exquisite point lace veil, the same worn by her mother, on her wedding day, which completely enveloped her. The subsequent reception, with breakfast, at the home of Mrs. Welling, in Parkave., was for the family and a few intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes will take possession of their new home, No. 215 East Seventeenth-st., near Stuyvesant Square, when they return from the

In the evening, in the same church, Miss Eliza beth Maud Gallatin, daughter of Mrs. James Gallatin, was married to J. De Courcy Ireland, by the Rev. Dr. Henry Y. Satterlee, who was also the officiating clergyman at the Hayes-Welling nup-The bride's brother, Albert R. Gallatin, presided at the organ, and while the guests were assembling played several selections. Miss Gallatin, who was given away by her uncle, Dr. Albert H. Gallatin, wore a gown of white satin procade trimmed with point lace, and a veil of lace worn by her mother on her wedding day. A large crescent of diamonds, a present from the young bridegroom, held it in place. Miss Gallatin also were a necklace of diamonds, a gift from her mother, and a diamond fleur-de-lis, presented to her by Fer aunt, Mrs. Albert Brown. The maid of honor, Miss Helen Dawson Gallatin, sister of the bride, locked extremely pretty in a toilet of white silk muslin over white satin, while the eight bridesmaids, attired two and two alike in green, yellow, mauve and pink tulle, made over satin of the same color and matched with short veils worn well back on the head, each fastened with a small cluster, formed a pretty group in the chancel. Each wore on her corsage the bride's souvenir, a

Mr. Ireland presented to his best man and eight ushers diamond and pearl scarf pins. The reception afterward, at the home of the bride's mother, No. 38 West Flity-fifth-st., was a large one.

The marriage of Miss Edith Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morgan, and sister of Mrs. August Belmont, to Buther Williamson, which took place in the Church of the Ascension at noon on Thursday, brought together a large detachment of relatives and friends of the young couple. It was a thoroughly representative (ashionable gathering. As Miss Morgan walked up the aisle with her father the sun, which a few minutes before had been obscured by clouds, shone brightly on the smiling, happy bride, who has all the charm of manner that beiongs to her mother and sister. She looked extremely pretty in her gown of white corded silk, made in the plainest possible manner, with a vell of tulle fastened well off the forehead with a half-coronet of white forget-menors. There were neither bridesmalds nor maid of honor. The reception and breakfast followed at the home of Mrs. August Belmorik, No. 129 Madisonave Mrs. Beimont, in a rich gown of mouse-colored velvet and fur, and Mrs. Morgan, in black satin, received with the bride, whose presents were almost regal.

a late hour last night the unknown schoone Station, L. I., was still pounding to piece in the breakers, and the life-savers had been unable to reach her. None of the bodles have as yet come ashore. The only thing found thus far was a writing-desk, which drifted in this morning on the ice, was evidently the property of one of men who were imprisoned in the rigging. It has jurnished a clew which will eventually tell the It contained several photographs, all taken in Germany, except one, which was taken in Norway. Four men of the crew of the schooner Emma, which went aground in the Lower Bay on Thursday, are still missing. The wind was still blowing a gale yesterday at Easthampton. A pilotboat which had been drifting about off the shore since Friday morning anchored about a mile off shore, two miles east of the village. Her rigging and sails were thickly covered with ice, as well as the decks and hull, and every sea that broke against her left an additional coating of ice. The vessel was completely disabled and the crew were undoubtedly having all they could do to keep life in their bodies. The vessel has shown no signals of distress, but the life-savers are keeping a close watch of her.

The steamer Metropolitan, in trying to force a passage through the ice in the Sound off Villet's point, yesterday crashed into the schooner Ayr, of St. John, N. Both crafts have been ice-bound at the Point since Thursday. They will wait for a thaw.

OBITUARY.

EDWARD DUNSCOMB.

In an oblivary notice of Colonel Benjamin Aycrigg, published a few days ago, it was stated that he was, before his death, "said to be the oldest living graduate of Columbia College." A classmate of his in the class of 1827 was, however, still living, although for some years incorrectly marked with "the fatal asterisk of death" in the Columbia catalogue. This was Edward Dunscomb, of Nashville, Tenn., who was thus the last survivor of the class of 1827. A private dispatch just received in this city announced the death of Mr. Dunscomb, on Friday last, at Nashville, where he had lived for more than forty years. He was born in Bermuda in 1804, and his great age made him very feeble during the last few years of his life. Mr. Dunscomb was a most scholarly man, and was a great favorite of Hamilton Fish, who desired him to take the office of Minister to Spain during the time that he (Fish) was Secretary of State. But Mr. Dunscomb was always Secretary of State. But Mr. Dunson would not averse to holding political office, and would not listen to the proposition. Secretary Fish knew that his thorough knowledge of the Spanish language, which he spoke fluently, and his acquaintance with that country's history would enable him to fill the office with sucress, Mr. Dunscomb inherited in Georgia a plantation with many slaves, and the day he came of age emancipated every one. He always had a peculiar horror of slavery, and in spite of his early life in Bermuda and Georgia always looked upon it as a curse. He was always an ardent Union man, and never hesitated to speak out his views. man, and never hesitated to speak out his views, no matter how hostile his audience. A crayon portrait, taken about eight years ago, shows a venerable and strikingly handsome face. He leaves ax children: Mrs. Harris Colt and Mrs. Joseph Darling, of New-York: Mrs. Joseph Ibbotson, of Richfield Springs, N. Y., Edward Dunscomb, of Glenwood Springs, Col., John G. Dunscomb, of Brooklyn, and Daniel Dunscomb, of Toledo, Ohio.

SHELDON REYNOLDS.

Wilkesbarre, Penn., Feb. 9,-A private telegram announces the death of Sheldon Reynolds, aged fifty years, one of the best-known citizens of this city and of the Wyoming Valley, at Saranac Lake, N. Y., where he had gone some weeks ago for relief from pulmonary troubles. At the time of his death he was president of the Wyoming National Bank, the Electric Light Company, the Wyoming Historical Society, ex-president of the Wilkesbarre Water Company and president of the Wyoming Commemorative Association. He leaves a large amount of real estate, consisting mostly of coal lands. A wildow and one son survive him.

J. K. HOYT.

J. K. Hoyt, who was for many years engaged in editorial and literary work, died at the house of a relative in Plainfield, N. J., on Friday, aged sixtynine. Mr. Hoyt was born in New-Jersey, and be-gan business in New-Orleans as a factor for plantations, amassing a fortune which he afterward lost. He was also in the hardware business in this city. He became editor of "The New-Brunswick (N. J.) Times," and afterward edited "The Journal," "Advertiser" and "Times" in Newark. About twenty years ago he went to Florida and bought an orange grove, on which his wife and son are now living. He made the first translation of Jules Verne's "Journey to the Moon," and got up an encyclopaedia of familiar quotations. He contributed numerous articles to magazines.

STILL ANOTHER BOND ISSUE.

NOT PLEASING TO THE PEOPLE. From The New-York World.

From The New-York World.

The President intimates that the terms arranged are the best that could be secured. This may be true so far as bank-parlor negotiations with this syndicate lare concerned. But the country does not like to see the Government dictated to in this fashion. It would have preferred to see an effort made in other directions.

IN THE HALDS OF A FOREIGN SYNDICATE.

From The Boston Herald.

The President appears to have put himself into the hands of a syndicate of foreign and native bankers, and his chief aim in the negotiation would seem to have been to make the difference between gold bonds and coin bonds as large as possible, with the view of giving an impressive object-lesson to Congress. The lesson is obviously cooked up, and the cooking has been done at the expense of American taxpayers.

HE DARES NOT FACE THE SITUATION.

From The Philadelphia Press. From The Philadelphia Press.

President Cleveland has not the courage and decision to rise to the situation and make an issue big enough to restore confidence. A loan of $200, 000,000, half the gold got in Europe, would do this, it would ena all doubt. It would shake every European money centre. It would give universal public confidence. Doubt as to the gold reserve would be over. The policy of successive $50,000,000 issues is doomed to failure.

WILL THE BENEFIT DE PERMANENT? From The Utica Herald.

By floating the greater portion of this loan abroad the Treasury gold will be replenished, but the drain on the reserve is likely, almost immediately, to set in again, so that it may not be long before there is another serious depletion.

A BLOW TO NATIONAL CREDIT From The New-York Herald.

It is still possible to prevent the disgraceful de-preciation of the country's credit involved in the sale of 4 per cents on a basis of 3% per cent, while solvent States can borrow at 2½ per cent. There is yet time for Congress to authorize the issue of popular 3 per cents to such an extent as may be necessary to protect the Treasury.

KILLED HIS BROTHER IN A RESTAURANT. curred about 8 o'clock on Thursday evening in the little dining-room in Lexington-ave. Jealousy prompted the double crime. The mystery surrounding the affair was entirely cleared away yesterday. when the police took into custody the two young women who were in the company of the young men

The prisoners are Minnie Moore, twenty-seven years old, of No. 330 West Fifty-first-st., and May Ives, twenty-nine years old, of No. 456 West Fifty-May Ives was arrested at her home by first-st. May Ives was arrested at her home by Central Office Detective Reedy, while the Moore woman was taken into custody at Eighty-second-st. and First-ave, by Policemen Lang and Campbel, of Captain Refliy's command. Early on Thursday evening, according to the statement made by the prisoners, they were in the apartments of the brothers. At 8 o'clock the party went to the little dining-room. Ernesto suddenly proposed to Miss Moore that she go somewhere with him. This aroused the brother's anger, as it appears to have been a settled fact between them that Enrique should alone have the right to be the young woman's csoort, as she had known him longer. Enrique resented his brother's proposal with an angry remark. Ernesto became enraged and slapped Enrique in the face. Enrique seized a catsup bottle from the table and threw it at Ernesto. The latter then put his hand in his pocket and drew out a revolver and fired a shot at Enrique. The bullet passed over the latter's head and buried itself in the wall. Ernesto pulled the trigger a second time, and the builet took fatal effect. As Enrique feil back lifeiess on the floor the murderer put the muzzle in his mouth and sent the builet crashing upward through his head. The young women say the entire affair took only a minute. When Miss Moore was arrested she told the detectives that she had neither eaten nor slept since she witnessed the tragedy.

Miss Moore also told the police that in conversation with Enrique Marquez, he had told her that he had had trouble in Guatemala and had stabbed a man there in a quarrel. Ernesto also said he was an exile on account of some misbehavior in 1st known that Ernesto was infatuated with her. Central Office Detective Reedy, while the Moore was an extra Guatemala.

From what has been learned from Miss Moore, it is known that Ernesto was infatuated with her, and was widly jealous of his brother. Miss Ives had only known the brothers a short time.

The young women were locked up last night in the East Sixty-seventh-st. station. They will be taken before the Coroner this morning, and their statements will be taken.

MUSIC.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

For the first time since Mr, Seldl has been conductor of the Philharmonic Society, one of its protrammes last night contained a composition by Brahms. It has been an open secret that the con ductor is not an admirer of the modern representative of classicism in music, but it is not to be imagined that that circumstance had anything to do with the omission of Brahms from the Philharmonic lists. Mr. Seldl is not the man deliberately to misconceive the mission of so noble an organization as that whose artistic destinies are in his hands. Like everybody eise, he knew that the society owed an obligation to Brahms, and last night, at the fourth concert of the season, he strove to fulfil it. The choice of the fourth symphony was a wise one, and though its performance was, on the whole, the least satisfactory achievement of the evening, it would be unwarrantable to say that this was due in any way to a want of sympathy with the work on the part of Mr. Seidi. On the contrary, he labored with great zeal give the work an eloquent reading. infused the last movement with a variety of feeling and a wealth of color quite remarkable The jocose movement also went with splendid spirit, and if the first movement seemed deficient in passion it was due to the composition, and not to unwillingness on the part of Mr. Seldl. Yet it was a pleasure to hear so dignified, noble and beautiful a composition as this symphony, which in portions surely reaches the loftiest heights that have been scaled since Schubert's day in the sym-phonic field. The rest of the first part of the programme was evidently a little too archaic for the band, as well as Mr. Seidl. It was the air, "Let the Bright Scraphim," from Handel's "Samson," which Mme. Nordica sang with most admirable which Mme. Nordica sang with most admirable command of the pure old oratorio siyle, but which was accompanied in an insincere and slipshod manner not at all creditable to the organization.

The second part of the concert was extremely brilliant. It consisted of the prelude and Elsa's recital of her dream from 'Lohengrin,' Mme. Nordica again being the singer: the air. 'Plus grand dans son obscurité,' from Gounod's 'Reine de Saba' (this in response to a number of enthusiastic recails), and Liszt's symphonic poem 'Les Préludes,' The commanding genius of Mr. Seidl never had finer exemplification than it had in his interpretation of the familiar prelude. After it he was compelled to bow his acknowledgments of the grateful applause of the audience four or five times, and it seemed for a time as if nothing but a repetition would suffice. It was indeed an extraordinary performance, full of sensuous beauty of sound, instinct with poetical charm, and such an illustration of a reposeful development up to a thrilling climax as is seldom met with in either concert or opera. It showed the hand and mind of a master—a peerless master in his department. Equally delightful and striking was Mme. Nordica's singing of the dream-song, she sang it in German, and lovely in the extreme, it was a pity that she obliterated the poetical effect of the number by supplementing it with the hackneyed French aria.

MME. PAUR'S RECITAL.

In the beautiful concert-room of the Mendelssohn Gles Club yesterday afternoon the wife of Emil Paur gave a pianoforte recital. She had been neard here only once before, and then in a concert of the Kneisel Quartet. On that occastor the audience was called on to admire her tastefulness and technical skill, but her playing was marred by dryness and want of variety in expression. Yesterday she played sixteen short romantic pieces and played them delicately and with nice appreciation of their poetical contents. That the general effect suffered a little from monotony was due to the sameness of sentiment in so many of the numbers, but she made a pleasant, if not a deep impression, on her hearers.
